From the Pulpit 5:30 am - Tips for Godly Living

- The God of freedom hears the cries of the poor, the oppressed, the marginalized, the poor in spirit. The Church must take its mission seriously and work for those who are in need. We must heed the cries of the poor, our women and children and turn away from acts of violence, for the day of the Lord will be terrible.

Parenting Tip: We must remind our children to be transforming instruments of God in the world, seek to live God's Word and let our gifts also reflect those who need our love and compassion.

ARCHDEACONRY ALTAR SERVERS QUIZ COMPETITION

Archdeaconry Altar Servers Quiz competition. This activity is an exercise aimed at promoting and improving religious education while teaching the Altar Servers to be well rounded individuals. It also seeks to provide an exciting but positive atmosphere to display their knowledge of the Bible, Anglicanism and the world around them.
 Each Parish in this Archdeaconry has been zoned for this competition as there will be four zonal competitions before the final competition. Your Parish's Altar Servers Guild is in Zone 3 where they will compete against St. Mary's (Bequia) Parish on Saturday November 19th, 2011 at 10:00 am.

SPONSORSHIP OF BULLETIN

Persons are asked to contribute to the weekly Bulletin. Cost is $100.00. A sheet will be put on the Church doors so that persons can indicate which week they wish to sponsor the bulletin.

Message from the House of Bishops

Province of the West Indies
House of Bishops Meeting
November 1, 2011

The House of Bishops of the Province of the West Indies meeting in Nassau, New Providence, in the Diocese of the Bahamas and the Turks and Caicos Islands, reflecting on the conditions of life of our people, were reminded in a very profound way of the many problems which confront our Caribbean lands at this time. Among these was the problem of crime and violence and its destructive consequences for the life of victims, perpetrators, and the wellbeing of the society as a whole.

While we are in no doubt that there are diverse contributing factors to this problem, we are equally clear that the solution to this problem is not to be found merely in the pursuit of a penal approach, through more vigilant policing and the promotion of a more efficient justice system. We are of the opinion that a more proactive approach which seeks to be preventative than punitive, would constitute a more creative and Christian approach to the situation.

We took note of the fact that the primary perpetrators of crime and violence in our Caribbean lands are young men between the ages of 15-25 through involvement in gangs and other anti-social activities. Anecdotal and other evidence point to the fact that many of these young men are lacking parental presence and support in the form of their fathers, in the majority of instances, but to a lesser extent the mothers, while being abandoned to the care of grandmothers, other members of the extended family and strangers, of just being left to fend for themselves. It was also observed that in many instances, even where there was the presence of some family support, the unit was lacking the material and emotional resources to support the basic needs of these young men.

Various cases were cited in which magistrates of the courts were disposed to explore various avenues for remedial intervention in the life of the young men who appeared before them but often could not identify such resources or, those identified, were already overloaded. The premise of such responses by the magistrates is the assumption that if these young men were provided with appropriate mentoring and support, given the absence of these in the home setting, there was the possibility of transformation and the pursuit of a more positive path in life by them.

It was also observed that it is not only young men who run foul of the law who constitute a pressing focus of concern, but the countless young men and women who are at risk for failure in the school system and the pursuit of antisocial activities because of a similar experience of deficiencies in the home and in the support systems which are available to them.

It was further observed that cases in which there were mentoring interventions, though not always successful, have brought about many positive outcomes. As Bishops, we are convinced that the Church has an important role to play in pursuing preventative and remedial strategies which may rehabilitate these youngsters through an intentional program of mentoring, willingly undertaken by clergy and laity of the Church.

We are fully aware that the cases cited do not constitute the limits to possible intervention in each diocese to the social challenges which exist at the national and local levels. The cultivation of a missionary vision and a social conscience will point the way to the myriad possibilities which exist in each context.

We understand mentoring to be a discipline with requisite attitudes and skills, if it is to be effectively pursued. We are also aware that mentoring is not something to be undertaken only by people with academic credentials and advanced learning, but something which begins with commitment and a spirit of self-giving. It is recognized at the same time that mentoring undertaken without proper orientation and training may be counterproductive or destructive. The task of equipping persons for the work of mentoring can be undertaken by various resource persons within our various territories and diocese who have received special training in this field and are often willing to share these with interested persons.

The Bishops are therefore encouraging each diocese to undertake a thrust which is centered around mentoring and, where this already exists in part, to strengthen such efforts. Such a focus can be congregation based, serving the youth of the congregation and community, as well as those in schools which are connected to our Churches. Individuals and groups may also be challenged to see such a focus as a part of the ministry to the youth of the wider non-church community. At another level, however, a more formal and proactive approach which involves partnerships with the officers of the justice system may be pursued in the various territories.

We commend this matter for the due consideration of the people of each diocese as a positive response to a very serious social problem which is threatening the wellbeing and welfare of all our Caribbean lands.
